

BALKANS ARE FULL OF FEAR

The Mussulmen at Uskub
Await the Signal to Massacre All Christians.

OFFERED NO AID

Turkish Troops Stand By and See the Inhabitants Murdered Without Interfering.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Aug. 13.—The Mussulman population of Uskub are meeting in the mosques, and have resolved at a given signal to massacre the whole Christian population, immediately the first insurgent band appears near Uskub, or on any other pretext. The Christians are terrorized. The Turkish troops, who are their only protection, do not show the slightest disposition to aid them.

The attitude of the Turkish troops was recently plainly manifested when a trainload of soldiers, shortly after leaving Uskub, fired on the Bulgarian workmen who were repairing the track. Three of the workmen were killed and their bodies were left lying on the line.

Christians Are in Terror.

The Christian inhabitants are afraid to leave their homes. The Vail has issued the strictest orders to the Mussulman population to remain quiet and not molest their Christian neighbors, but his orders are not regarded in the slightest degree.

The Mussulmans are ripe for murder and carnage and it is impossible to curb them.

A band of bashi bazouks has crossed the Bulgarian frontier in the district of Teledro, killed three frontier guards with yataghans, and wounded two others. They also set fire to several houses. This raid has created great excitement in the district.

Destroy a Bridge.

The revolutionary organ, Autonomy, says the insurgents, after two unsuccessful attempts, have succeeded in destroying with dynamite the bridge at Exchessco, thereby absolutely stopping communication between Salonica and Monastir.

No less than 800 Mussulmans have been massacred throughout the district Monastir by insurgents, whose movements continue to gain ground.

The insurgent bands in the vilayet of Adrianople are also active. One band recently captured a detachment of sixty Turkish soldiers, near Haskol, close to the Bulgarian frontier.

Twenty-four battalions of reserves in the vilayet of Anatolia have been summoned to the colors.

Arms Are Captured.

The Turkish minister here has secured the detention of a quantity of arms and ammunition destined for Bulgaria. The forwarder of the war munitions was sentenced to pay a fine of $4,000 for the illegal exportation of munitions of war.

A fierce battle is reported to have been fought in the neighborhood of Monastir. Three Turkish battalions attacked a thousand insurgents and after the fight had raged for six hours the Turks were repulsed with the loss of 210 men killed or wounded. The insurgent loss is not given.

COLOMBIA TO OWN PANAMA RIGHTS

Franchise Expires Next Year—Why
Treaty Was Lost—Can Get Better Price in 1904.

Bogota, Colombia, Aug. 15.—Via Buena Ventura, Aug. 19.—Having rejected the Panama treaty by unanimous vote, the Colombian senate is now seeking to secure a new treaty with the United States. The senate has been in secret session two days and it is reported that President Marroquin has been authorized by congress to make a new treaty which will not require further ratification, but that the basis given for the treaty will probably prove unacceptable to the United States.

It is considered however, in official circles, according to reliable information, that the authorization given by congress to make a new treaty will furnish a basis for reopening negotiations with the United States.

The senate rejected the treaty on the grounds that its provisions were in open violation of the constitution which makes no provision for the cession of territory or sovereignty.

Sultan Tears American Flag.

N. J., Aug. 19.—Maj. Robert L. Bullard has demanded redress from Sultan Deseen, the tribal leader of the Lanao Moros. The sultan recently surrounded a small detachment of United States troops paying him a friendly visit with a strong force of warriors and offered battle, his men insultingly tearing an American flag.

BANK AT ANGOLA, IND., HAS CLOSED ITS DOORS

Private Institution Is Forced to Suspend When Check for $17,000 Is Presented.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Aug. 19.—The private bank of Kinney & Co. at Angola, Ind., has closed its doors. The owners of the bank are John Kinney and the estate of the late Peter W. Russell, represented by the heirs, Mr. and Mrs. Morton Deal of Toledo. The immediate cause of the failure was the attempt of County Treasurer George W. Williams to withdraw $17,000. The bank could only pay him about $5,000. The financial troubles of the bank have been caused by its attempt to finance a trolley line from Angola to James Lake, three miles distant. The deposits amount to about $80,000. Assets and liabilities not known.

Mr. Kinney has filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy. The petition shows assets amounting to $153,984 and liabilities of $143,000. Of this $93,000 is due in certificates of deposit and $25,000 on individual deposit. Mr. Kinney says trouble has been due to rapid withdrawals from the bank since the death of his partner, Peter W. Russell, a few months ago. He affirmed dollar for dollar would be paid and so depositors are patient and hope for the best, although the circumstances are much the same as the recent failure of McClellan and DeKalb banks in this place. The Kinney bank has done business here for forty years.

COLOMBIA WANTS NEW CANAL TREATY

Having Rejected the Pending Measure,
South American Republic Seeks
More Satisfactory Pact.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—"How could any man with the least sense of patriotism or what constitutes patriotism expect anything else from the Colombian congress?" asked Representative Hubbard of Iowa while discussing the rejection of the Panama canal treaty. "The members of the Colombian congress knew, as did everyone else informed on the subject, that the concession of the Panama company would expire in 1904 and its property revert to the Colombian government. The extension which the Panama company asserted to have secured is all fiction, because the Colombian congress and never met to grant it. They would be giving away what our government has placed a valuation on of $40,000,000 for $10,000,000. If they wait until next year they will get $50,000,000."

SCOTLAND REJOICES OVER RE-

FAIR BAND WAS FULL OF FROLIC

The Famous Band Was in the City
Last Evening, Led by Sousa Himself.

The advertising department of the inter state fair now in session at Beloit got in its work at Janesville last evening. Accompanied by the band which has been contracted for throughout the fair, George H. Cram, C. H. Rogers, A. Loewi and Frank Van Wart escorted a number of showmen through the streets of the city, stopping at the Grand hotel, the Myers house, and other central points.

Siegfried, the impersonator, who is managing one of the many attractions at the fair, gave a couple of imitations which convulsed the crowd. As John Philip Sousa, in pointed beard and eye glasses, he went through the complete list of gymnastics and Delsartean exercises which are characteristic of the famous bandmaster, while a "barker" the same man who made "Bobo" famous at the Elks' carnival last fall—drew the attention of the crowd.

"That's John Philip Sousa. Wise! Don't give it away!"

"Step up and see Sousa. He is having his valet polish his eye glasses."

"Yes, that's him; that's John Philip Sousa about to lead his band."

"Hear Sousa and his band. They get $1,000 a minute for playing—some minutes."

Having sent the spectators into paroxysms of laughter by his eccentricities, Siegfried, alias Sousa, then proceeded to lead the band as a Hebrew would do it. Between intermissions a song and dance team from one of the shows of the fair did some clever stunts. They attracted their full share of attention until they came in conflict with the police force, after which they were conspicuous only by their silence and their comedy make-up.

Rosenthal, their manager, was on the alert for some slight diversion. When a police officer walked by he hailed him. "Say, you'd better make those fellows shut up. They are impeding the public highway."

He intended the remark as a joke, but the officer took it otherwise. Walking up to the comedians who were roaring out a coon song at the top of their lungs, he ordered them to cease their dulcet strains.

"Served you right," said Rosenthal to the discomfited singers. "You're all right when you're playing, but keep your mouth shut. Dutely went to a dentist's the other day," he added to a bystander, "and they pulled his voice by mistake for a tooth."

HOLDER OF FOUR KINGS
SAYS HE WAS SWINDLED

Passenger on Ocean Steamship Declares Card Sharps Cleared
$10,000 on the Trip.

New York, Aug. 19.—When the Kaiser Wilhelm II was warping into the North German Lloyd docks at Hoboken an excited passenger leaned far over the rail of the saloon deck and shouted to the throng on the pier: "Card sharps and swindlers aboard! Have the police come to the gang-plank!"

When the gang-plank was let down two men fought their way down the narrow bridge into the arms of policemen. Then the excited man identified himself as Robert P. Hill of the Finance Surety company. He charged his opponent, who said he was Morris Levery, a mining expert of the Murray Hill, with having swindled him and many passengers at cards.

The men were taken first before a police magistrate and then to the United States commissioner. As neither official had authority in the matters pertaining to the high seas the two men were discharged.

Hill claimed that Levery and his confederates got away with $10,000 of the passengers' money by sharp practice. He said he lost $250 himself, although he held four kings. His opponent had four aces.

NON-UNION VS.
UNION LABOR

Roosevelt Says He Has
No Preference, and Will Protect Independents
Seeking Work.

IMPORTANT RULE

He Means To Enforce the Principle Laid Down
by the Coal Strike.

Washington, Aug. 19.—An investigation ordered by the president is now in progress in each department of the government to ascertain if there is a strict compliance with the principle laid down by the anthracite coal and strike commission, "that no person shall be refused employment or in any way discriminated against on account of membership or non-membership in any labor organization."

President Roosevelt in his letter to Secretary Cortelyou in regard to the case of Assistant Foreman Miller of the government printing office said:

"It is, of course, mere elementary decency to require that all the government departments shall be handled in accordance with the principles thus clearly and fearlessly enunciated."

At the time this letter was written the labor organizations failed to see its application to all the departments of the government.

Opens All Departments.

President Roosevelt has been receiving reports, however, which indicated that the discrimination against persons not belonging to labor organizations was not confined to the government printing office, and he determined upon a thorough investigation.

It has been the practice to refuse employment to persons not connected with labor unions.

When the reports showing this condition were brought to the attention of the president he immediately directed that the finding of the coal strike commission be rigidly adhered to by all officials. He instructed Secretary Moody to see that in all the navy yards no man was refused employment because he was not a member of a labor organization.

President Is Determined.

It is learned that the president now has under consideration the question of extending the same policy to cover all government work. This would mean that in all the shipyards work on government vessels could be performed by either union or nonunion men, and that, having committed the administration to the principles stated, and to the further finding of the strike commission, "that there shall be no discrimination against, or interference with, any employee, who is not a member of any labor organization by members of such organization," it would be the duty of the government to protect the workmen in their rights.

It is admitted by several officers that the president was determined that in no branch of the government shall there be any discrimination against applicants for work by reason of their not being members of a labor organization, and that while he recognizes that the labor organizations may make serious opposition to the application of this principle to all government work he is determined to see that it is enforced.

NEW POTATOES IN MADISON FIELDS

The Seeds All Came from a Rock County Field of Last Year.

Up in Madison is a man named T. R. Taylor who last year took several specimens of Rock county potatoes and planted them. He claims to have thirty-five different varieties and does not know what they all are. The Madison Democrat in speaking of the garden says:

T. R. Taylor 1336 Jenner street, is doubtless growing more varieties of new potatoes than any one else in Madison or immediate vicinity. He has 35 different varieties developing in his garden at the rear of his home and the novelty of the thing is, Mr. Taylor has not the remotest idea what kind of potatoes he will get. In one bed are 14 plants, the foliage of each being strikingly different from that of its neighbor. In still another patch are 21 plants which have been transplanted in order that they might have a better chance to prove their merit.

Last summer Mr. Taylor gathered a number of potato balls from the vines, while passing through a field in Rock county. They were taken care of during the winter and planted as soon as the season was far enough advanced.

This method by which new varieties of potatoes are produced and Mr. Taylor may be fortunate enough to secure an Irish tuber that will not only bring him fame but possibly fortune also.

Although the potato balls planted were gathered from the noted Snowflake variety there is little possibility if any, of the new ones being like the parent potato, as the rule is to produce something entirely different.

It will take fully three years to determine fully whether there is anything of value in the 35 varieties now being so carefully tended by Mr. Taylor as the tubers obtained this year will not be sufficient indication of the degree of merit or otherwise.

Mr. Wheeler is also showing the famous Apollo piano player and crowds are attracted by this excellent program rendered by this constant use. Those going from Janesville and vicinity tomorrow are most cordially invited by Mr. Wheeler to visit his exhibit and receive free beautiful souvenirs that he is presenting to the ladies. For many years Mr. Wheeler has been in the piano business and in all sections of the county he has made scores of warm friends by his upright dealings. Drop him a postal for a catalogue and prices.

Handsomeness Vehicles

Well worthy a visit is the exhibit of high grade vehicles made by the Gesley Manufacturing company of Beloit. This enterprising firm is showing the Racine Wagon and Carriage company goods and the exhibit is all under cover under a mammoth tent only a short distance from the grand stand. If ever a carriage exhibit attracted wide attention it is this one for every known style of vehicle is being shown from the rubber tire runabout to the stately survey. The Gesley company have a total of 60 different styles to select from and indeed one must be hard to please who fails to find in this exhibit a vehicle to please him. Several sales were made on the opening day to well known Beloit and Rock county residents. During this week special low prices will be in force on all vehicles shown. The Gesley Manufacturing company need no introduction to the citizens of Rock county who have honored them for years for their strictly business methods.

STOCK MARKET MUCH IMPROVED

HENRY CLEWS WRITES OF THE EXISTING CONDITIONS.

PRICES ARE NOW GOING UP

Bear Raid Seems To Be About Over for the Present, at Least.

A decided change for the better has taken place in the stock market, and the sharp rise which started on Thursday quickly dispelled the wave of despondency that threatened the whole business community only a few days ago. So sudden a change was a course largely due to manipulation, based upon the change of position, by some of the big operators who exerted such a severe and persistent pressure upon the market for weeks past, being assisted by an organized effort to check and punish the over-aggressive bears. It is of course impossible to learn whether the market leaders have fully accomplished their purpose or not. The presumption is that they have, or the market would not have been allowed to recover in the rampant fashion that it has done. It is quite certain that the decline of the last few months has been materially intensified by speculative operations to accomplish certain purposes, however, much natural conditions may have justified lower prices, and it is equally likely that the market will now continue its recovery until a normal level is reached. No one pretends that there has been any change in intrinsic conditions during the last six months to correspond with a drop of 30 to 50 points in good securities. Granting that the top of the boom was touched last year, that the tide of prosperity has begun to recede, that there is still a large amount of unmarketable securities, and that we have been overdoing generally, there was no warrant for a decline in stocks so utterly out of proportion to other changes. A part of the decline was certainly intensified for speculative purposes, and if it prove true that these have been attained a stronger and active market is in prospect.

Wall street has undergone a pretty thorough test. Many weak spots have been eliminated by forced liquidation; stocks have passed from weak into strong hands, and thus the whole speculative situation has been much clarified by an unwelcome but necessary house-cleaning process. The market is by no means free from uncertainties, for weak spots still remain; but there is no reason now for the destructive distrust which was undermining the whole financial fabric before the turn came. Very likely important developments will follow recent operations which may result in facilitating some of the larger deals that big financiers are known to have contemplated. How far these plans may have been a factor in the conduct of the late bear campaign will never be known, but it is fair to credit its managers with sufficient shrewdness to take all fair advantage of technical conditions.

Outside of the stock market the outlook is satisfactory. As previously stated, our farmers are reasonably sure of another season of prosperity. Though large crops are not to be expected fair yields are probable, and what is equally important, good prices are assured for all agricultural crops. The government report indicates a corn crop of 2,245,000,000 bushels, which has been exceeded only twice; a winter wheat crop of 410,000,000, which has only been exceeded twice, and a spring wheat crop which has been surpassed four times. Of cotton a fair sized crop seems certain in spite of backwardness, and good prices are assured another year. For all our agricultural products a good demand is practically certain, and in the absence of heavy supplies growers will receive profitable prices, this being practically true of southern cotton planters. Some reaction is noticeable in the iron trade, which is our basic industry, but lower prices are likely to invite a fresh run of orders which could not be profitably placed at the old level. Labor agitation is diminishing and contractors know better what conditions to depend upon. The decline in stocks seems to have temporarily checked new enterprises, but this will cause no harm, as conservatism now will prevent trouble later on. The textile situation is confused by scarcity and speculation in cotton, a condition that will be changed by the arrival of the new crop in another month or six weeks.

Monetary Situation

The monetary situation has been much relieved by local liquidation and payment of foreign loans. More concern at the high level of loans is shown than circumstances warrant, considering that the surplus reserve is $20,000,000 above the 25 per cent requirement. Loans are but slightly above deposits, while it should be remembered that the banks could in addition loan upon their capital and surplus amounting to considerably over $200,000,000, and still be within the limits of prudence. As a matter of fact, the New York banks are in strong condition and have their funds well in hand. Liquidation may have cancelled many weak loans, but the funds thus released have been transferred to those with stronger credit, thus improving the situation without making any apparent change in the volume of loans. Very shortly crop demands will assert themselves, so easy money rates are not yet in prospect. The chances for serious stringency, however, are remote, for conditions are growing more favorable to gold imports, besides we shall have a little difficulty in borrowing abroad for legitimate requirements. A favorable feature is the larger purchases of wheat for export and the declining tendency of foreign exchange. Some realizing may be expected after the late sharp recovery, but the situation has been greatly improved by the diminution of the supply of weakly held stocks. A better investment demand exists than for several months, which has already taken a large supply of bonds and stocks out of the Street. HENRY CLEWS.

NEW MACHINERY AT POST WORKS

Twisting Machine Has Arrived, and is Now Put Into Position.

A new machine has arrived at the Cement Post factory for twisting the wires that are placed in the center of each post. This will make two of these instruments and when the plant is going full force they will be both kept busy turning out the lengths of wire. The old machine was made by the Hoefer Manufacturing company of Freeport, Ill., and will twist two lengths of number nine wire together very easily and with a different sleeve attachment is enabled to twist number seven wire. The one twister was not enough to supply the demands made upon it, however, so the second machine, built on similar principles was ordered from the Rock River Machine company of this city. While built on a like plan, this apparatus is made to bend a heavier wire and can manage either number seven or nine size. The second wire bending machine is not yet put in position but will be ready for use when the factory starts work again next month.

Mr. Peters, the superintendent at the works, has gone to Beloit this week and will have a complete exhibit of the factory's production at the fair. A sample fence will be set up with the different sizes and kinds of line, and corner posts, hitching posts of the different varieties made and section markers.

The early morning train out of Milwaukee on the northern division has been discontinued and placed on the La Crosse division, thus giving that division eight trains out of Milwaukee. Hartford citizens are indignant as to the result.

The largest passenger engines in the northwest are now in service on the North-Western road between the Twin Cities and Chicago. They are seventy-two feet long and weigh 320,000 pounds.

The new Chicago, Cincinnati, & Louisville road, which will enter Chicago over the tracks of the Chicago Transfer company, will spend $350,000 for locomotives.

Quite a reduction is made in the new tariff of express rates applying in Texas by the Texas railway commission.

Are Stupid Children Always Stupid?
Professor M. V. O'Shea in the August World's Work.)

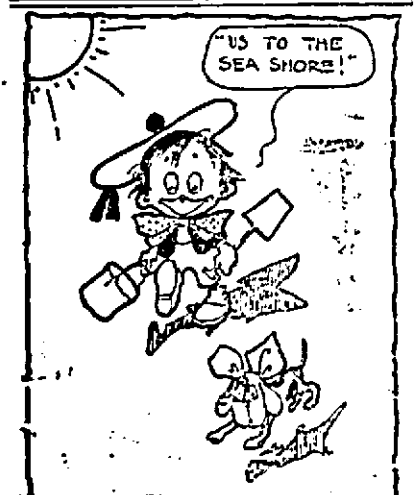

A great many shortcomings in school-children have been shown by recent investigation to be due to other defects than those mentioned, but almost no attention has been paid to them because they have not been regarded as of any consequence. Eighteen per cent. of our Madison school-children were found to be "mouth breathers." In the majority of cases adenoid tissue, or a sort of third tonsil, was found obstructing the respiratory passages; and it thus exerts a very baneful influence upon both bodily and mental development.

low very carefully for some time the careers of two children who were afflicted with the difficulty. They would go to school in the morning in a condition of indifference and lethargy and it was impossible to interest them in anything that was done. They were behind their grade and had acquired the reputation of being hopelessly stupid, both teachers and parents were severe in their treatment of the children, thinking thus to arouse them to action. I found that in their sleeping they had great difficulty in breathing, and were tossing about throughout the whole night. They gained little sound, restful sleep, and as a consequence were in a

BESMIRCHES STATE.

It is now two weeks since Gov. La Follette, in his Monona assembly speech, made the assertion, in speaking of the legislature of 1901, "that money was offered and refused is susceptible of proof," and, although almost every newspaper in Wisconsin, except his Milwaukee organ, has called upon him to furnish that proof to the proper authorities, as it is his duty to do under the constitution, and under his oath of office, he takes no steps towards that end. He therefore must stand before the people as making an exaggerated, in plain English, an untruthful statement, as a means of getting support and votes. Unless he does his duty, the whole superstructure which he has built up as a reformer falls to the ground. Without truth as a foundation, it has nothing reliable upon which to stand. It is to be regretted that the governor, carried away by his own eloquence, should make a charge of that kind. It is to be regretted that he makes other charges against the members of the legislature of 1903, insinuating that they too, were actuated by unclean motives in voting as they did upon certain measures which were before them. The effect is to give Wisconsin unpleasant notoriety.

People outside the state, not knowing the members of the governor, get an idea that this is a "boodler" state, when the reverse is true. The inference is given that the men elected to the legislature in Wisconsin are rascals and grafters, when as a matter of fact, they are, in nearly every instance, men of integrity and standing, and prominent in the community in which they reside. Because they did not see fit to follow the governor in every idea which he suggested is no valid argument that they are not equally as honest, as able and as much interested in the welfare of the state as is Governor La Follette himself.

The right to think and act, independently, is inherent. This is not an absolute monarchy, but a republic. Free speech, free thought, and free action are every man's just rights. Because all men do not agree and the United States with their republican forms of government are going to the dogs and will soon fall to pieces if certain so-called reform ideas which he advocates are not adopted, is not just cause for the innuendo that those who oppose those alleged reforms are enemies of the people, are unworthy of trust and are scoundrels of the deepest dye.

It is always the narrow man who argues that if he cannot have his particular way, no good can come. It is the broad man who speaks well of his neighbors, of his town, of his state, and of his country. People who think and reason are not to be caught by clap-trap demagogism when they know that the conditions which surround them are infinitely better than the conditions in other countries and are getting better and better every year, as people become more enlightened and more civilized. He who helps build up is by far the better, safer leader than he who seeks to tear down, for the latter too often is guided by personal, not public interests.—Waupaca Post.

MACEDONIA.

It is but a few weeks ago that the whole world shuddered when the name of the savage butcheries of the Russians at Kishineff were mentioned. The brutal means the slavish nation took to rid itself of its Jewish subjects called for so many contributions and petitions that from a local affair it became an international one and proud Russia learned what the world thought of its cruel butcheries. Today the eyes of the world are turned from Russia to Turkey and the cunning and cruel methods of the Mohammad is subject to more than discussion. Poor Macedonia is fast being bereft of its citizens and its towns are becoming depopulated by the sword of the conquerors. The people cry out in anguish for aid and to their rescue is sailing the fleet of the great White Czar down the Black sea. It is not a strange sight Russia who is barely over the criticisms of the world turning from its path to aid a country that is no worse treated than it served its own subjects. Telegraphic reports announce that dead bodies of women and children choke the great sewers of the cities, and that rivers are running red with the blood that is shed. It is another Kishineff and we see Russia the instigator of the Kishineff affair sending its war fleets from their fastness of the Black sea down to protect these poor people. There is something besides charity in the move and it would not be a surprising piece of news to learn that Russia was in charge of Constantinople and the Turks were out in the cold. Europe would then start and warfleets would be hurried to the scene. England and Germany and Italy would be allied against Russia and France and a second Crimean war might follow. Russia in the eyes of Europe should not be allowed to have Constantinople nor one inch of Turkish soil but some day it will. Intrigue and greed will seize the key to the Mediterranean and all the combined forces of the great powers will not be able to dislodge them. Russia waited long for an opportunity and now it seems to be approaching. The flag of the White Czar may yet float over the crescent of the Turk.

PRESS COMMENT

Milwaukee Journal: You can't tell of a man's intellect by the size of his head any more than you can tell of his eloquence by the size of his mouth.

Milwaukee Free Press: If the price for a saloon license was $100, what was the price for a sidewalk for closing a street, a bay window, for a stairway in an alley, and some other things?

Milwaukee News: However, Gov. La Follette's kind of harmony calls for more than a delegateship to the national convention. The governor isn't going to desert the people with the bait of empty honor dangling before his eyes.

Milwaukee News: If Uncle Ike continues to be a "harmony" candidate for governor, it will prove a severe strain on the morning "reform" organ to be true to "reform" without tripping up the man that has supplied it with its financial sustenance.

Racine Journal: The manufacturers of Wisconsin have not yet recovered from the scandalous charges against them made by Governor La Follette. As for the legislators, they are used to such and expected only scurvy treatment and libelous charges.

Milwaukee Sentinel: If Wisconsin farmers are oppressed by the railroad corporations, it is a wonder that Secretary of State Houser, who knows all about it, should have invested the savings from his salary as chief clerk of the state senate in a stock farm.

Manitowoc Eagle-Star: There are rumors and rumors of all kinds but the politicians on both sides are sawing wood all the time. And again it can be stated there may be changes before the next election in the political aspect that will make the wise politician feel like a fool for past talk.

OLD SOLDIERS HOLD MEETING

Survivors of Thirteenth Regiment Hold Reunion Today.

NINETY-EIGHT WERE PRESENT

Talk of War Days—Many Interesting Stories—An Excellent Time.

Survivors of the Thirteenth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry are holding their annual reunion in this city today. About thirty years ago the first reunion of the survivors of the regiment was held. In the years immediately following one or two anniversaries were skipped, but for at least twenty-five years the succession has been unbroken. The majority of the meetings have been held in Janesville as the most central location.

The Thirteenth is a distinctively Janesville regiment. It was organized in this city, and camped at the fair grounds until ordered south on January 18, 1862.

At the time of leaving the state the regimental officers were: Col. Morris Mallory, Lieut. Col. J. F. Chapman, Major Thomas Bigney, Adj. William Ruger, Surgeons J. M. Evans, E. G. Horton, S. L. Lord, Capt. Edward Ruger of Co. A, Capt. E. E. Woodman of Co. B, Capt. Aug. Kummel of Co. C, Capt. E. W. Blake of Co. D, Capt. R. H. Hewitt of Co. E, Capt. F. E. Stevens of Co. F, Capt. A. N. Randall of Co. G, Capt. J. H. Pratt of Co. H, Capt. Lauderdale of Co. I, and Capt. Pliny Norcross of Co. K.

Much Garrison Duty
On leaving Wisconsin the regiment was ordered to the south, and saw duty in five states, Kansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and Texas. Most of the time they were stationed on garrison duty, but they have two fights recorded on their battle flag. They were in the battles at Ricketts's hill, Tennessee, and at Garrettsburg, Kentucky. At the battle of Chickamauga they barely escaped active service. They were fatigued by a long march which they had just completed and were sent to the rear to guard the transportation, while the regiment which had been performing that duty was sent to the front.

During four years of active service about eight hundred men were on the regimental rolls, and of that number about four hundred are now living. The regiment was finally mustered out in December of the year 1865.

S. C. Cobb is the present president of the association, and W. P. Clark is the secretary.

No Fixed Program
No set program ruled the meeting of the Thirteenth today. The morning was spent in handshaking and the exchange of reminiscences. At the noon hour the Woman's Relief Corps served dinner in the Grand Army hall after which the veterans repaired to the courthouse, where the business meeting occurred at two o'clock. Following that one after another of the old soldiers was called upon to speak, the entire program being informal in the extreme.

Among those present today was James Raynor who made the journey from his present home in Barnes, Kansas, to be present at the reunion. It is the first time he has been with his regiment since the war. When he enlisted his home was in Green County.

Those Present
In all there are ninety-eight survivors present today. They all had dinner in the W. R. C. rooms and a good dinner it was, too. The following is a list of those who were present:

FINDING FAVORS THE PETITIONERS

JUDGE HANDS DOWN HIS DECISION IN BELOIT CASE.

THE INJUNCTION STILL HOLDS

It Is, However, Much Modified in Many Essential Points.

Judge Dunwiddie this morning handed down his decision brought by the workmen at the Berlin works in Beloit to have the injunction secured against them dissolved. The decision holds the injunction to be binding but makes changes in certain clauses that were objectionable to the workmen. While the injunction still holds the decision is considered as a partial compromise in favor of the complainants.

One point which the Beloit strikers most objected to in the injunction was the order prohibiting them from "moral persuasion" in trying to influence non-union strikers. This point has been practically gained by the decision of Judge Dunwiddie. The following are his words on that part of the injunction. "It is urged that some of these prohibitions in the injunction forbid the use of personal suasion, but I do not so construe it." The following is the order of the court, drawn from the findings:

The Decision.
The motions of the defendants in the above entitled action for an order dissolving the injunction made and granted in the above entitled action by the court on the 17th day of July, 1903, having come on to be heard before the court on the 15th day of August, 1908, present the Honorable B. F. Dunwiddie, circuit judge presiding, and after reading the summons and complaint the injunction order and undertaking, the answers of the various defendants and the affidavits presented and filed on behalf of said defendants in support of said motion, and the affidavits presented and filed on behalf of the plaintiff in opposition to the said motion, and on all of the papers and records made and filed in said above entitled action, and after hearing Smith & Pierce and John L. Fisher in support of said motion, and Winkler, Flanders, Smith, Bottum & Vilas and Fethers, Jeffris & Mout in opposition thereto, and upon due consideration, and the court being fully advised therein, it is

Ordered, that said motion to dissolve the said injunction made and granted in the above entitled action by the court on the 17th day of July, 1903, be, and the same hereby is denied; and is further

Ordered, that said injunctive order dated July 17th, 1903, be, and the same hereby is modified as follows:

1st. By striking out the seventh prohibitory clause, which said clause reads as follows: "From doing, or causing to be done, and from attempting to do, or attempting to cause to be done, and from continuing, or causing to be continued, or from accomplishing or bringing about, directly or indirectly, any or all of the acts complained of in the complaint in the above entitled action."

2d. By striking out in the twelfth prohibitory clause the following words: "Or induce or prevent the public or any portion thereof from purchasing the goods, wares, merchandise and product of the factory of the plaintiff."

So that said clause as modified will read as follows: "From writing or distributing, or causing the same to be done, any newspaper article, circular letters or other writing instruments with intent to interfere with the plaintiff's business."

3d. By striking out in the fourteenth prohibitory clause the words: "From committing any of the acts of which the plaintiff complains and alleges the defendants and their associates threaten they will do, or continue to do," and it is further Ordered, that as so modified the said injunctive order made and granted in the above entitled action by the court on the 17th day of July, 1903, be, and the same hereby is continued in full force and effect.

Will Address Barbers: It is expected that M. H. Whitaker will address a meeting of the barbers of Milwaukee, both masters and journeymen, which will be held in that city next Tuesday evening. VICTORY BY A BIG MARGIN

LOCALS DIDN'T DO A THING TO MADISONIANS.

CURTIS SAVED THE DAY

By Defeating His Opponent Kept His Team from Whitewash—Ladies Play for Medal.

Madison was buried deep yesterday. The Sinsissippi players succeeded in gaining a victory on the hostile grounds early in the season, but what they did then was not a marker to the treatment they dished out for the visiting Maple Bluff team yesterday on the local links. When the last of the unlucky thirteen Madisonians had retired in favor of his opponent his team stood sixty-one down. Only a single one of the vanquished the man against whom he was paired, Harry Curtis defeating F. E. Field four up.

F. W. Jacobs, holder of the state consolation cup this year, was defeated by his old rival, Al Schaller, four up.

...Forty Years Ago...

Janesville Daily Gazette, Wednesday, August 19, 1863.—The news from Charleston is exciting. Evidently there is nothing besides a two hours' conflict going on, and the result must soon be known.

Morgan's Raid.—In Jackson county, Ohio, Morgan captured 200 horses, and the union forces appropriated 46 valued in the aggregate at $29,700. The merchandise, cash and huggles stolen by Morgan was valued at $16,000. The damage done to the Portsmouth and Newark railroad will run up to about $50,000.

Valuable Contributions.—Lieut. Ammen, of the 12th battery, has presented us with several valuable additions to our rebel museum.

Washington, Aug. 18.—The Tribune's dispatch from Charleston, via Fort Monroe, this morning, says that Friday and Saturday the bombardment was terrific. The action of the sea on Sunday prevented our gunboats from working, but they were expected to join in the attack.

Coming Attractions.

The old maxim that nothing succeeds like success finds complete exemplification in the pronounced success with which the jolly comedy "Hello Bill" has met the past four years. The work of a hitherto unknown American author, it was at first viewed with feelings of distrust on the part of the theatre-going public and it took more than the usual amount of work to convince comedy lovers that here was a real comic play. But like Caesar of old, "Hello Bill" came, saw and conquered, and now in its fifth year of ever increasing popularity easily lays claim to the title of "the best American comedy".

The company which will present the merry playlet here this season is described as being one of uncommon strength. The title role this season is assumed by the eminent comedian, Mr. Harry Blackmore and his associate funmakers comprise some of the best known comedy players of the stage.

"Hello Bill" will be played at the Myles Grand this evening.

The new military comic opera "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" the Whitney Opera company latest and most phenomenally successful opera will be seen at the Myers Grand, Aug. 23. It consists of a series of brilliant military pictures, set to music. Much of it is permeated with patriotism, particularly a rousing song with chorus "My Own United States". It is

FAILURE OF PANAMA CANAL INTERPRETED AS A BULL CARD AFFECTING THE GENERAL LIST.

The transactions in stocks in New York yesterday reached the million-share limit and prices covered a wide range of fluctuations. Monetary conditions continued comfortable and there were heavy payments of the subtreasury on account of gold imported at San Francisco. The crop reports in the main showed further improvement, with weather conditions of a favorable character. The defeat of the Panama canal treaty was interpreted as a bull card, not only upon the shares of the trans-continental railroads, but as affording a sort of guarantee of easy money in the autumn by reason of removing the necessity of transmitting $50,000,000 abroad.

The market opened almost entirely indifferent to the lower quotations reported from London. Prices still felt the impetus of the recent sharp recovery and within the first hour advanced 1 to 2 points. A reaction followed, which, in some instances, extended to 1 per cent, but the market soon steadied and in the afternoon most issues rose to the highest point of the day. The maximum improvement reached approximately 2 points and in some cases more, the leaders in strength including St. Paul, Rock Island, Reading, Baltimore & Ohio, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Missouri Pacific and some of the specialties in both the railroad and the industrial list. London sold very heavily of American stocks all day, the liquidation reaching its highest on the afternoon budge. Heavy profit-taking by local interests was also noted and the combined pressure told on prices in the last half hour. A decline set in, which gradually extended from one prominent issue to another, until in the leading stocks the reaction had amounted to about 2 per cent.

The market closed active and under the influence of the late heavy selling movement. Government bonds were unchanged. Railroad bonds were strong but shaded off in the afternoon in sympathy with the decline in stocks.

Minnesota Lumbermen Accused of Being in a Conspiracy.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 19.—The suit brought by the government against Lieutenant Governor Ray W. Jones, alleging that he had taken part in a lumber deal by which the government had been robbed of $800,000 feet of timber, has caused a sensation here. Mr. Jones has been concerned in lumber difficulties previously and it is understood that the suit will show a conspiracy among large Minnesota lumber dealers to denude government land of its timber.

SPANISH PEGGY

A STORY OF YOUNG ILLINOIS

By MARY HARTWELL CATHERWOOD

Copyright, 1903, by Herbert B. Stone & Co.

CHAPTER III.

Ann Rutledge heard through the open window Peggy's muffled cry and struggle, and ran to the door. By starlight it was barely possible to see a shadow fleeing from the hand-mill; but Antywine La Chance, in pursuit of it, passed across the bar of light, a lithe, long-bodied and long-limbed shape, his uncovered blond hair flying back from a face cut like the high-bred features of a French noble. He bounded by the hand-mill and crossed a fence at the foot of the garden.

When Antywine thought he was about to overtake the object down the ravine, a scamper of horse's hoofs sounded through the valley. Peggy's captor had left a horse ready for flight. Instead of making south-eastward for the Rock creek bridge and the road to Springfield, he rounded the bluff and the village, and was evidently striking toward Beardstown. The western continuation of New Salem street, stretching across the prairies until it met and curved with bluffs along the Sangamon, was the route to Beardstown, which stood at the junction of the Sangamon with the Illinois.

Light-footed as a deer, scarcely pausing to think, Antywine with inherited instinct turned east toward the river, though it was the direction opposite to that in which Peggy was carried. A boat could be found at the mill. The river was high and running swiftly. By taking advantage of the unusual current he might reach the bluff road as soon as a horse bounding across the mud of the prairies would be able to reach it. What he would then do afoot he did not attempt to foresee. There was a small settlement at the mouth of Rock creek called Wolf. Oxen were more plentiful than horses in Wolf, as New Salem; yet Antywine had one passing flash of determination to go there and demand a horse. But breathless with haste, he plunged through naked woods and down the terraced bank of the Sangamon, sliding on dead leaves in his descent, straight to the mill.

The boat was tied above the dam. He pushed out before he thought of the dam, half covered by swelling water and roaring across the width of the Sangamon. Antywine was never more alive than when his feet were planted in a boat. He came of a line of voyagers who had threaded Canadian rapids time out of mind. Although his later years had been spent in Belleville, off great stream courses, his in-born dexterity was too much a part of him to be forgotten. There was no time for thought. He swooped down the curve poised in the stern of his boat, laughing aloud at the shock, which nearly swamped him. The boat ran without direction, making for partly submerged trees while he bailed with his hands. Antywine stuck out an oar for a rudder, and turned his craft into the racing current. So, bailing with one hand and steering with the other, he got under way, and was soon able to sit on the bench, fit the oars into rowlocks, and pull with the racing force which spun him along. Branches and logs menaced his dim course.

The shores were black. Froth spots like white money appeared and disappeared around him with phosphoric swiftness. And underneath rose and fell the bullfrogs' diapason. Not many miles down was the fork of the Sangamon, where the stream turned toward the Illinois. Beardstown, by prairie and river-bluff route, was nearly 40 miles from New Salem. Frost was out of the ground, and a bottomless trail would delay the most hurried rider. The scalloped bank, ascending and descending in serrated cliff and hollow, seeming to swim past Antywine, finally curved away from a wider current; and he made for shore through drift. He drew the boat out, and left it beached above the rising water.

There was no sound abroad in all that void darkness except the Sangamon's low note and the intermittent cry of frogs. He thought of sloughs on the Beardstown road and of hungry wolves infesting the night. Starlight had become lost in thickening mist, and as Antywine pushed on he felt the sting of rain in the face. He tried to distinguish a track which ought to darken the pallid turf near this place, and set out in the direction of Beardstown.

He heard at his left the suction of horse feet in mud. It came nearer, and he braced himself to spring at the bridle, if he had been so fortunate as thus to intercept Peggy's captor. But two horses, instead of one, plunged up from a slough, and swept past him in a tearing race toward Beardstown. "Shickshack and Steur Abe," thought Antywine. He shouted after them, but they did not hear him. There was so little travel at that season he felt sure these riders were in pursuit of Peggy, and comforted, he followed lightly on, keeping to the spongy dead grass by the roadside.

The humid forest stretching from the bank of the Sangamon still darkened his way with skeleton trees. He passed an empty cabin which he had seen once before when hunting deer. The rain now began to pelt.

Though he had lived so long among English-speaking people at Belleville that their language had become in a measure his own, Antywine never found himself able to part with backskins. The hunting shirt was sometimes exchanged for one of linsey, but buckskin breeches, molding his supple limbs down to his moccasins, he always wore, making them himself, as his father had done before him. Indifferent to weather, he stepped on through darkness and was within hand's reach of an unsteady object before he saw it.

Antywine gave a laughing shout to scare a wolf and followed it by an exclamation. He lifted the toppling figure in his arms and ran back with it to the empty cabin.

Peggy had a blanket around her, but she was wet and cold and seemed partially stunned. The punchcoons or split logs which floored the cabin sagged inward as if a sill had rotted at the farther side, and the chimney was a ruin upon its own hearth. Perhaps wolves or wild hogs made this place a lair. Antywine had not his tinder box with him. It was impossible to get a light. The fallen door he dragged aside from its opening and made a seat for Peggy.

"Stay here, sweetheart," spoke Antywine, using an English word which he did not quite understand, but translated in his own mind as "little one."

He made the circuit of the walls, kicking his way in the dark, satisfying himself that no beast housed with them. Then he sat down on the door where he could shelter Peggy from the wind.

"Are you hurt, sweetheart?"

Peggy found her voice with a laugh. "Goodly! you've come, Antywine! I was trying to walk without my crutch when you picked me up. I had to hop."

"How you happen where I find you?" "I don't know. The horse stumbled and fell down, and maybe I was pitched on my head. This blanket was round me so tight that I fought to get my mouth and nose and hands out. It seemed like there were a dozen horses racing, and I thought they would all run over me. But when I got up I was beside the road, and could just hear the mud splashing away off."

"Who is it that steal you?"

"Of course, it must have been that Pedro Lorimer man, though I couldn't see him, and only heard his voice when he spoke to the horse. He threw a blanket over me and made me ride on the horse's neck, and I'm so little and lame I couldn't help myself. Are you cold, Antywine?"

"No," he answered, with a Canadian's indifference. But Peggy gave him a corner of the blanket and bade him draw it around his shoulders, which he did.

The rain beat upon shingles and spouted from the cabin eaves. There was snugness in being housed after so much anxiety and exertion.

"We wait here," the boy laughed quietly to himself. "Shickshack say to Steur Abe Lincoln, 'Antywine, he is nothing but a squaw.' But I find you, and Shickshack have not."

"Did he call you a squaw?"

"Me, yes; he call me that."

"You are like a woman, Antywine," said Peggy, after considering. "I want you to be like a woman."

"Tonnerrre! Why?"

"Because you are like one."

Antywine turned this innocent reason in his mind.

"How can we go home, Antywine?"

"We wait," he replied, "until Shickshack and Steur Abe come back. They ride the horses you think will run over you, and they not see you in the dark. They chase the man to Beardstown."

"Are you sure?"

"I think so."

Peggy's mind at once turned back to New Salem. "I wonder what Sally will do when we get home."

"It is that woman that make a squaw of me," said Antywine. "Since my father marry her she has been worse than a loup-garou. I not mind the flat or the stick—bah!—but her evil eye, and the beard on her chin—salnts! I am crawl all over! It is not healthy to be scare all the time! I wear a charm against her. When she take Shickshack I think I will go to my father's peop' in Canada. But if I do she will have nobody but you when she is enrage. And see what is done to you when we are but out of the house, sweetheart!"

Peggy busied herself in silence and drew an object from her which bounded among the chimney ruins.

"I am not going to be a peg-leg any more," she announced. "I'll not strap that wooden leg to my knee again."

"But you not able to walk," said Antywine. "I carry you," he added, in afterthought.

"Shickshack will take me on the horse when he comes. It's so ugly. Don't you think a peg-leg is ugly, Antywine?"

"I have not consider," he responded; adding, with French grace, "not anything that belong to you is ugly."

"My mouth," suggested Peggy. "It will not shut."

"It is like the wild plum," said Antywine, "when the white bud is just break through."

Though they had been housemates almost a year, Peggy and Antywine felt that they were just discovering each other. The tall, silent lad had once in a while ventured on some kindness to the girl. There was between them the whimsical sympathy of companions in misery.

"And I am so little," continued Peggy, after a silence. "People think I am only ten years old. Ann Rutledge is large and beautiful."

"Mam'selle Ann Rutledge," responded Antywine, "is too large to be carry. You are not too large to be carry."

"But I want to be," insisted Peggy.

"Me, I think you will grow," conceded Antywine, indulgently.

"Do you think I will always be lame?"

"I not know. The doctor in Belleville cannot say."

"The doctor in Belleville put that peg-leg on my knee. Sometimes I think if I try to use my leg, Antywine, it will grow stronger. But I have to hop yet when Sally takes my crutch from me."

"Shickshack think, and me, I think too, she have bring that lameness on you."

"I never contradicted her when she told him it was a fall; but she knows when she struck me and how it hurt. Don't tell him, Antywine. Shickshack is so good."

"She not fool me," said Antywine. "I think now I will give you my charm to keep off evil."

"What is it?"

He took her hand in the darkness and laid a small image on the palm. She knew it was something which their religion taught them to venerate.

"No, Antywine, I will not take it from you."

"Keep it," he insisted. "I feel better when I am out hunting if you have that around your neck. She bring evil into the house. She is worse than Chasse Galerie."

"What is the Chasse Galerie?"

"Have you never heard of the Chasse Galerie that fly across the sky at night?"

"How could I hear about such things in the Sac village or at Belleville?"

Antywine proceeded at once to tell the story of the wild huntsman and his dogs, and their chase above the clouds. This led on to feux follets, or balls of fire, into which bad spirits turned themselves to lure sinners into quagmires. Then loup-garous, or man-wolves made darkness flame with their eyes, to Peggy's imagination.

"Are your feet or hands cold?" Antywine inquired once in a while. Peggy answered "No," forgetting she had hands and feet, her large, excited gaze fixed on the wonder-world of folk-story. His voice abounded in sympathetic tones. It was full and golden, reaching into distance or sinking to monotonous as he half told and half sung his people's legends.

So hour after hour passed; rain continued to pour down the shingles and visit them in gusts of spray through the broken chimney.

It was a delicious experience to remember a lifetime. But as Peggy's responses became few, Antywine stretched out his legs and made a pillow of his lap with a corner of the blanket, to which her drowsy head came readily down. He watched and she slept until darkness faded to the pallor of dawn.

The noise of horses' feet in the heavy road, for which he had waited so long, could at last be heard approaching. He withdrew carefully from the head of the sleeper, and went out to intercept the riders.

"They were splashed with mud and jaded, moving side by side, their tired horses snorting fumes of foam. Thus more than once the men of New Salem had come back from chasing horse-thieves, less ready, perhaps, to give the details of the exploit than were Shickshack and his companion. Both drew rein when they saw Antywine, and he told them directly where Peggy was.

Shickshack asked where he found her. He pointed to the road beyond the cabin, and in his brief Canadian-English repeated what had happened.

"Your squaw boy doesn't put up many fizzlesticks and fireworks, but he seems to be worth two men," observed Lincoln.

His lank hair dripped moisture. He was haggard with hard riding.

"You catch the man?" inquired Antywine.

"No," Shickshack answered in disgust.

"You know him?"

"No. Me not care now."

"He winked out," said Lincoln. "We lost him this side of Beardstown. The closest view we had was when we nearly ran him down back here. We intended to raise a party and hunt. I reckon you better bring the little girl now, so we can get home to break-

Shickshack's red face revealed itself through growing daylight polished like copper. He gave a strong grunt of satisfaction when Antywine set Peggy behind him on the horse. The Canadian boy mounted lightly to a seat behind Lincoln, and as they rode toward New Salem a clear whiteness like the promise of fair weather appeared in the east. Water hung beaded on the stems of trees, but a great commotion of robins came out of the woods.

It was the general opinion in the village that Don Pedro Lorimer had "done it." Why he should put himself to the inconvenience of trying to carry off such a poor little thing many declared they could not understand. All day Lincoln was visited at the store by inquiring friends, who sat on counters and salt barrels and interrogated him about his night's ride. He joked, as any man among them would have done about the hard service taken out of borrowed horses, instead of dwelling on the Indian's affairs and the labors of the night. Lincoln had the strength of three ordinary men.

"I allow," said one of the Carolina settlers, "that it was an ornary trick of one of them Grove boys."

"I guess you are wrong there," put in a Massachusetts man. "The Grove boys know better than to pick the runt out of a litter. If one of them wanted to steal a girl he wouldn't go so nigh the tavern and stop on the outside."

The outrage was resented as a municipal indignity, whoever had attempted it; but it stirred less resentment than it would have stirred had any other young maid in New Salem been the sufferer. It was talked about a fortnight with zest and much repetition. By the end of a month it was still good material, when women took their knitting and visited one another of afternoons. But by muster day other slow happenings had covered it.

If Sally knew more about it than any one else, she kept the secret. The Sac brave often fixed his eyes on her with speculation in them.

"In my tribe," he said once to Lincoln, "a warrior can take a tent-pole and beat his squaw, or he can give her plenty goods and drive her out of his wigwam. But me marry white woman; me have to stand her like white man."

He was at first concerned, and questioned Peggy about the loss of her wooden leg.

"I will not wear it," she repeated stubbornly. "It hurt, and I threw it away."

She hopped about the street on her crutch, which Ann Rutledge had found by the hand-mill the night the alarm was given, her injured leg hanging straight beneath the deerskin garment. Some change in her was noticed, even by her schoolmates.

"Who cut Peggy Shickshack's hair, Vlane Rutledge?" inquired Nancy Green, when the girls sat outdoors with their dinner reticules the first warm day. The budding woods were then alive with bees.

"Ann," responded Ann's younger sister, with asperity. "We have her tagging to our house all the time, now. I allow the Indians might as well move in with us."

"Shickshack's wife doesn't visit the neighbors, does she?"

"No. She stays at home and heats water to scald the boys with."

"Peggy looks nicer with her hair cut straight around below the ears and combed smooth. And I am glad she lost her wooden leg when Satan or something tried to carry her off."

"My brother Red," exclaimed Martha Bell Clary, "told me the horse blanket that was thrown over Peggy Shickshack that night smelt of brimstone!"

"Your brother Red," retorted Nancy Green with impatience, "gets threatened with brimstone so much in meeting that he smells it on everything!"

"Well, how do you suppose the boat Antywine La Chance went down the river in, got back to the mill by morning, when he rode lime on horse-back?"

"Antywine brought it back himself. Part of the way he pulled the boat, and part of the way he rode horseback. You get such stories in the Grove!" said Mahala Cameron.

Martha Bell wagged her head and looked at Peggy, sitting apart, eating corn bread in solitude. She was glad to be Martha Bell Clary instead of Peggy Shickshack. None of the girls meant to be cruel. They wished Peggy well, but made her understand she was not as other daughters of New Salem.

"We all thought she was queer before we found out she was a Spaniard," said Martha Bell.

"You'd be queer, too," exclaimed Nancy Green. "If you'd been born a Spaniard and raised among the Sacs, and dressed always like a squaw."

"But I wasn't."

"Peggy can talk the Sac language just like Shickshack," remarked Mahala. "Let's get her to do it for us."

"Shickshack won't let her," objected Ann Rutledge's sister. "He wants her to learn English. He says she learned to speak English in a year."

"Humph!" commented another of the group, resentfully; "the master shows partiality to Peggy Shickshack, so he does; but I wouldn't be her, if she is the best reader in school."

The first really warm noon of the budding year, while Peggy's schoolmates were looking at and talking about her, Antywine stood at the open tavern door waiting to speak to Ann Rutledge. Too bashful to knock, he shifted from one moccasin to the other, hoping that some kind saint would send Ann to the door to inquire what he wanted. He had a parcel in his left hand, and sometimes hid it before him and sometimes hid it behind his back, keeping his right hand ready to uncap himself, if she appeared. There was not anything in the woods or on the prairie which Antywine feared. But Ann Rutledge represented to his mind the power of society; and he was coming to see that power. She entered, singing, from an inner room, and paused, throwing her long braids behind her back when she saw the Canadian at the door.

He snatched off his cap, standing erect, narrow of hips and shoulders and full in chest, an elegant lightness of make and grace of carriage setting him apart from English-Americans, and fixed his wistful blue eyes upon her.

"Come in, Antywine La Chance."

"No, mam'selle. I will stand here."

"Did you want to see any one?"

"I want to see you."

"Here I am." The girl dimpled at his embarrassment.

"Mam'selle, I have to ask of you a favor. Will you do me the kindness to look at what I bring in my hand?"

Mr. Samuel Griffin of 203 Locust St. journeyman carpenter says: "I had a severe attack of la grippe and as a result weakness of the kidneys set in. The secretions from those organs were greatly disordered, annoyed me much at night and I seemed to have limited control of them. After finishing the treatment my kidneys could sleep all night without being disturbed. I am better now than I have been for years and give all credit to Doan's Kidney Pills for bringing about the result."
